THE STATES AND UNION.

VOL. XXIII

ASHLAND, OHIO. WEDNESDAY MORNING, JULY 8, 1868.

Business Directory.

JUDICIAL OFFICERS. WM. OSBORN, Common Pleas Judge.
TO BUSHNELL Probate Judge.
ET DRAYTON, Cl'k Com. Pl's & Dist. Courts.

COUNTY OFFICERS.

R M CAMPBELL, Auditor WILLIAM G HELTMAN, Treasurer, L H KIPLINGER, Sheriff. EORGE W. URIE, Recorder. IENRY PIFER, Surveyor, DR. J. EMERL'SK, Coroner, WM. COWAN, Infi'y Diretors. MOSES LAITA, SCHOOL EXAMINERS.

R M ZUVER Ashland. ELIAS FRAUNFELTER.

BANKERS. TI FIRST NATIONAL BANK.

H. LUTHER, Prest. J. O. JENNINGS, Cashier Hulbert Luther. Jacob Ctall, G. H. Top-ping, J. C. Jennings, James Purdy. Loan money, receive depositis, buy and sell Coin or United States. Bonds, remit money to any part of the United States, and also to England, Ireland, Scotland and Germany. Sell Revenue Stamps—in sums of $20 at 2 1-2 per cent discount.

CITIZENS BANK. J. P. LOWAN, Pres't. A. H. MIRES, Cash'r.
ISAAC GATES, Teller, T. C. BUSHNELL
J. W. SMITES,
L. S. BAUMGARDNER, W. S. BATTLES-Dealers in Gold, Silver, Exchange, U. S. Bonds, Uncurrent money, Revenue Stamps &c. Discound approved paper, pay interest on time deposits, and do a General Banking Business.

HOTELS.

MILLER HOUSE, North side Main Stree', Ashland, Ohio M. Miller, Proprietor. Good accom-

Wm. McNulty, Proprietor, South side M. Street, Arhland, Ohio.

LAWYERS.

R. M. CAMPBELL, Atterney at Law, Ashland, Ohio, will at-Court will receive special attention.

JOHN J. JACOBS, Attorney at Law, Ashland, Ohio. All or two mushroom millionaires had tried to enter our charmed circle and retired in dismey from the difficult task. Of on us all First National Bank, up stairs.

JOHN D. JONES, Attorney at Law, Arbland. Particular at tention paid to collec ing and business in Probate court. Office on church street, be-McCOMBS & CURTIS. Attorneys and Counsellors at Law, Ashland Office in Bank building, over Beer's Hardware store.

H. S. SEE. Morney at Law, Fire and Life Insurance Agent, and Notary Public. Particular attention paid to collecting, P. obate business Partition cases and execution of deeds, mortgages and contracts. Office in Miller's ing woman.

WM. N. BEER,

PHYSICIANS.

GEORGE W. HILL, M. D., Physician and Surgeon, Ashland, Ohio.— Particular attention will be paid to the treatment of the following special diseases: Dyspepsia, disease of the Liver, the Fid-peys and Scrofula. J. P. &owan, M. D. T. S. Hunter M. D.

DRS. COWAN & HUNTER. Having formed a copartmership for the practice of medicine will give particular attention to surgery and the treatment of chronic diseases. Office over Citizens bank opposite town hall, where one or both may be consulted on Wednesday and Saturday of each week

Miscellaneous. RALSTON & VANTILBURG. Jewellers and Silversmiths, three doors west of Miller House, Ashland. Gold and Silver Pens, and a choice variety of Jewelry kept constantly on hand. Highest price paid for old gold and silver. Repairing done to order and on reasonable terms,

PLAIN AND FANCY

Book and Job Printing

IN THE NEATEST STYLE

AND UPON THE

SEA . IL SECTION

MOST REASONABLE TERMS

AT THIS OFFICE.

From the Banger (Maine) Democrat. The Chieftain of the West.

A sound comes rolling from the West,
With volume deep and cadence strong;
It sweeps New England's mountain crest,
And trills her shadowy glades slong.
By flerce Niagara's sparkling foam,
Through flowery fields and forest dun,
In gilded hall and cottage home.
It wafts the name of Pendleton.

and backward shall the echo fiv. And backward shall the echo fly, Athwart the prairies gorgeous vest;
Nor shall the thrilling chorus die
Among the vineyards of the West.
But o'er the Mississippi's tide,
To mountain, studded Oregon,
Shall swell through all the nation wide,
The honored name of Pendleton.

By Monticello's sacred shade,

Where rests the Sage in holy sleep,
His soaring spirit oft hath strayed
To quaff its inspiration deer.
And when the spotless mantle fell,
From proud Virginia's lofty son,
His guardian angel caught the veil,
To grace the noble Pendleton.

He comes, the nation's woes to cure,
Her griefs to soothe, her wounds to hea!
To lift Q:e burden from the poor,
And stay the proud oppressor's heel.
Commerce shall find her champion here—
Religion calm her votary, too;
The lofty statesman own his peer;
And Freedom boast a guardian true?

His wand the stubborn will shall mould,

Bid Chaos flee, and Order reign;

Law's sacred majesty uphold,

And hallowed peace restore again;

Shall claim the frenzy of the hour,

Bid brothers, long estranged, embrace;

And tell how Love adorneth power,

How mercy is the crowning grace!

Of noble mien, young, pure and brave, With courage for the welcome strife; "Tis his to rescue from the grave A gasping nation's waning life! To save a Union, Heaven ordajned, A Constitution Heaven has blessed,

A Constitution Heaven has obtained, So shall the People, love-constrained, Exalt the Chieffain of the West! Select Story.

MISS AUBUSSON.

[From the Galaxy, ] She dropped down upon us suddenly as a star from heaven. And, indeed she was beautiful enough to have come from some other, kindlier sphere, where the more genial elements favor a higher degree of physical perfection than is common in this bleak, half-'amed world, full of east winds and north winds, and icy cold and sultry heat, of sorrow, and wrong, and work, and

We were rather an aristocratic set at the Thornton, priding ourselves upopulent purse were not enough to se cure admittance to our coterie. Shoddy we utterly refused to tolerate. One in dismay from the difficult task. Of angrotected women, fascinating women, unattended by masculine relatives, we were shy to the verge of discourtesy For do not our hotels teem with ad venturesses in search of a fortune, a position, a hueband ? Accordingly, when we read Miss Au busson's name on the register, and learned that she had taken the pretty suite of apartments just vacated by Vignette, the artist, we shrugged our sholders, smiled incredulously, and re carded it as another proof of the amiable weakness of our host, who, in spite

Carl and I had a parlor which we used in common. Miss Aubusson's Attorney at Law Ashland, Ohio. Office cr. He was given to music; I was an guard the approaches to every professicn, and had won leisure from success Beside the porter, who was temperarily in service there was a desicated, one heavy trunk after another came up, and the maid scolded vivaciously in broken English. The ventil stor between our room and the entry was open, and madmoisélle's sharp Gallic accents reached us at intervals. "It is you, Monsieur, that is of the most shameful behavior. Why do you not go away when I ask you? I Shall tell it to Mecs." "Norine !'.

It was an oxquisite voice that interupted the discordant French tones, ne, vibrating, round and soft, having flowing grace and rhythm about it, as if it would fal! easily into song. "Pray don't make any disturbance Norine. Please go away now, Mr. Cum berland !" There was a muttered reply-he was but a boorish fellow, surely-and then he tramped heavily down stairs. "What and who is Miss Aubusson

I wonder?" I said to Carl. "A lady, certainly," said Carl. "Can she have the gift of beauty? That voice is dower enough for one woman."

I laughed. Carl bad touched upon one of his pet fancies. He was indifferent to those facial peculiarities that indicate character. To his misty shortsighted, Saxon blue eyes, the werld of faces was much the same. But his fine musical ear, his magnetized organiza-And impressed by him, I, too, had fal- 'Oh no! Than len into the habit of judging poople by this time. But when we met ber the - There was an indescribable pathos next day in the drawing room, her in these last words and her eyes suddenbeauty surprised us. Nature had been ly filled with ters. almost too munificent.

the room with a wonderful, indescriba- sitting there awhile I went up to our ble grace. She had an etherial face, cwn parlor, fair and pure; little rings of blonde | Carl was there alone | consolation. I longed to go to her, ine sat in a wilderness of sparkling | Mademoiselle had only fainted—find its way through and saturate the Pendleton, and hair curled around her wide, ca'm fors. He laid down the newspaper that he but I dared not. I mended the fire and shreds and light, floating fabrics—connothing more, he assured them. The earth; coarse materials and sandy soil full candidate.

flashes at times, were always singularly entered. clear and transparent. And with all her exquisite undulating grace, there was in the carriage of the beautiful head, in the curves of the neck a regality, a noble pride.

"Incedit reginal" whispered Carl.
In half an beur everybody had accepted Miss Aubusson. She was the crowned queen of the Thornton, henceforth. Mary old bachelors, who suspected all woman of designs on their to allure. The matrons were charmed nervous, convulsive motion, betrayed by great good luck that we met no one. source of pain and forboding to her. I findly gof him home. On the way And this she said with a sob that shook When we reached the l enchantee, and the young men raved about her, The Drawing room ceased to attract when Afiss Aubusson was absent. And that was very often-far too often for these enthusiastic new friends you are ignorant, whose friends, if she

Not more than two evenings a week bedid she spend with us. At other times she was driven away after dinner in a close coupe, which the black driver brought around at seven o'clock.

Miss Aubusson never made any romark as to the way in which these evenings were spent. She was singularly uncommunicative, maintaining a qu'et reticence which discouraged any as little like a reasonable person as poss expression of curiosity or interest. But | ible. from the French maid, Norine, the ladies understood that "Mees" went into society with friends at the other end of the city.

heir effect. Sne was wont to come down in the morning, her face whiter and more transparent than ever. The fine-grained skin flushed less rosily than at first; the luminous, beautiful eyes shone out pinched look that told of suffering. I asked the question with mingled cu teres.t Miss Aubusson had been at the l'hornton six weeks before I had guessch that carl Fries was in love with her,

He was an odd fellow; quite undenonstrative; capable of intense, concen trated feeling, aspiring to impassable heights of nobleness, delicate and dainty in h s taste, a Brahman among Brah mans, as pure as Sir Galahad, and as brave and chivalrie as any grand knight on our delicate tastes, our genuine of old; not affluent in small graces; band high breeding, our appreciation of some after the Norse type; blonde hair promptly to all legal basiness entrust modest genius, and our scorn of gild—cd, blue eyed, of a fair, large symme—her."

bis care. Bankrupt cases in U. S. ed ignorance. Parisian dress and an expression where the Norse type; blonde hair cover th emperament naturally worship

I could not at first divine whether or not Miss Aubusson loved Carl. She superscription?" bore herself towards him with the same

It was a simple enough accident that showed Carl's heart to me, The bell had rung for dinner, and

Carl and I, having just come down stairs, were crossing the half on our way to the diving room, when, to our surprise, we saw Miss Aubusson stand- it for myself." ing at a side door, in carnest conversation with a shabby, dissipated looking man whom we had seen the first day she came, and who Norine said, was an agent for "Mees." There had been a little wondering gossip about the connection of a man of such disreputable appearance with a lady like Miss Aubusson; but as he had never been seen again, and she had crept into all our hearts, it died away.

On this occasion the bell had rung apartments were on the opposite side some minutes before Carl and I left of the corridor. Carl was my half broth our room, and as there happened to be no servant about, Miss Aubusson cer-

She was standing just within the doorway, her wine hued silk gleaming And so it happened that we chanced to in the light of the chandelier, her head dressed and went out. be sitting in our parlor after the five o'clock dinner, while Miss Aubusson's indicative of carnestness; and as we people were bringing up her baggage. approached we heard the pathetic, soft entreaty of her voice. She started at the sound of our foot-of the removal. The man growled as ed to go to the dining hall. There were two or three letters in her hand : her eyes were wonderfully bright ; ber sensitive upper lip quivered with emo

We stood aside to let her precede us With a slight bow she did so, but at that moment one of the letters slipped from her hand and fell upon the floor. Carl hastened to pick it up.

"Miss Aubusson ?" She turned, saw the letter in his exended hand. Instantly her face whitened. There was anger, shame, fear in it as she said, almost clutching the paper that he put into her hand. "Mr. Fries, did you see the super scription upon this letter?" But she glanced up at him as she spoke, and her countenance changed "I beg your pardon! I should have knowe that you would not look at it. Carl's fine face flushed. 'You are good to say so," he an swered. "No!" she was smilling now in her own sweet, sunshiny way. "No! I was very wicked to be so rude. Pray forgive me! This letter is connected with a painful secret that concerns a friend of mine." "Her embarrassment, her emotion were past concealment. A soft fire shone in Carl's eyes. "Will you accept my sympathy, Miss Aubusson? Can I not be of service Oh no! Thank you most kindly But not one can help me. If any one could, I should be proud to ask it of I had faith in Miss Auburson from you. But no one can do any good."

head; her bazel eyes, lit by golden was making a pretense of reading as I waited for Carl. It was an hour or verting old fashions into new ones. entertainment would preced-" "Is she there?" he asked.

n hour ago."

Carl get up and began to move about.

"I am glad she is gone. I have been some terrible disgrace for the woman" an hour ago."

"Carl, I am sorry for this !"

"For what ?" "I am sorry that you have fallen in love with a girl of whose atceedents "What ?" perhaps."

He gave mea hurried glance, and then flung himself into a chair, looking as to her history and connections?--Whatever was the nature of the con-vivialities it which she assisted, it was evident that they were exhausting in able person who presumes to seek Harsh questions, I know; but I felt ustified in putting them. Carl winced risibly; his face whitened. "The mystery may involve nothing discreditable to her, Nelly," be answer of purple hollows; there was a sharp, ed. "I am sure she has good reasons for whatever she does. She may have What was it that preyed upon the disreputable friends, but if she were life of this young, tender creature? It pure I would pluck her out of the pit was proud of that, too. And I had my shunned their sex. itself. And, Nelly, when some carrion iosity and pity, Carl had a keeper in- crow of gossip was pecking at her reputation did you not say you would take your life on her goodness?"

This style of argument was embarrassing. 'You see, Carl, she has something to frightened when you picked up her

"And the fear was lest you had dis-tle acting. Or the alarm may have sur rate, Carl, promise me that you won't marry her till you know more of her than you do now." "I will not marry her unless she assures me that she is willing to confide her history to me, and let me judge of "Pshaw !" But these were the best terms I natures as his.

could make artist in an humble way. We had both passed the rough places which vas unobserved.

And I was sure that it was Miss Aubus son pleading with such agonized earnestness for I knew not what. Carl's

> "Carl !" I called softly. He came out instantly, dressed as he "I think she will need me. hoar that man has been in the entry,

It was now quite twelve. I could hear the murmur of conversation below. The house was not yet asleep. Pres-

Carl opened it upon Miss Aubusson standing there in her white eashmere coquetry for once in her life?" wrapper, her features tense and sharp, her eyes wild and tearful.

Fries." "I will-with my life."

face. "I need you now... was eager to help her. But she had did last night. And then I told her.

But through the opened door I had myself by accepting it, for she could seen the man leaning against the wall, not repulse me as she might have done intoxicated, as I believed. The French maid stood in the doorway of Miss Au tion to me. Something of this I said. exhibition, profaned by the gaze of all busson's parlor, shaking her fist, and by And then I knew my avowal was not the world, sold for money ! other vivid pantomime expressing her painful to her, that she was proud and A moment she bent before the wonscorn of the intruder.

I heard Carl say : "I will take him away, Miss Aubus-She broke into a low ery.

"Oh, don't hurt him, Mr. Fries ! Oh be geatle with him! If you can only would be so; and here the color all flut- in a snowy mist. get him away without any one seeing him I will thank you forever. I shall Where shall I take him?" She gave an address, and added a few all that I ought to know."

broken words of thanks. lmost too munificent.

The hurried running to and fro beA petite creature, she floated into A petite creature, she floated into
A petite creature, she floated into Carry off as quickly as Nosible the after a time, a door shut somewhere, be.

The hurried running to and fro besurplus water. Sites should be select wards. We learn that when the redraw ing room that evening, and after and all was still again, except for the and agents to engage in their sale.

more before he came in. He looked Miss Aubusson told me so, as a pretty pale and troubled. He sat down in the apology for Norine's rudeness. The chair I silently placed for him, and woman actually snubbed her mistress."

trying to keep myself from going to he. Once with her I shall betray everything And I want to be master of myself—which I am not to night."

Some terrible disgrace for the woman been her mother's the loved.

I sat down beside him presently.

"A French ma time! But what of myself—which I am not to night."

Yes, thank Heaven! I was all the here last night?"

The pallor of intense feeling was time afraid, though, that he would colupon his face. His blue eyes shone lapse on my hands. I got him across the bare mention of him, and said that. I too, was silent. The evanescent celibacy, paid fearless homage to the steely bright—the fire of love burned the hall into the servant's entry, and so asleep or awake, he was never out of gleams from the street lamps showed gracious sweetness which cared so little steadily-but around the mouth, the out by the rear entrance. It was only her thoughts-never anything but a his countenance pa'e, calmali its phases, he talked in a maudlin way about 'Kate,' her from head to foot.' but I paid little attention to him " And > has any, we do not know, who may dared to ask it. I gave no answer. him. His fine face was beautiful with be--', Is the pause that followed we both re vivid color, his eyes preternaturally called the voice and look of tender pain bright. with which she besought Carl not to "Anything! A beggar in disguise, but him, the unfaigned distress with length. which she sobbed out that she should die of shame if he were seen.

"He is not all looking !" I said at thing uncommon about him. A fine nature in ruins." I added.

like that." There was no word to be said, no Ah, Nelly, come, come in here !" consolation to offer. I could almost have wished Miss Aubusson at the bot- He did not heed me. tem of the sea before she had come to be the disturber of Carl's peace. We had not been without our troubremembered sorrows. Carl had climb. us, dull souls not up to the finer forms pangs when the large, unsatisfied na- The spacious house was already her voice in my ears.

covered something that would betray face for any sign of shame or dishonor tive , there was an occasional his durer."
of her own. But I could not find it ing the long drawn out scenes, and in the interludes shrill calls for somebody kindled her cheeks. Aubusson was a vicarious sufferer, when question as to whether I had seen the Carl bent over me in passing, his azure eyes aflame. "I am going to see her. I have askprised her into directness. At any is the spectre that haunts her," he said. saying, impetuously, "God help you if it is anything that can come between you and her ?" For I saw that, for bet ter or for worse, he had given his whole gagement was up, but she was persuad soul into this woman's keeping-given it with that entire surrender that is on- think it must be a temptation. She ly possible to such strong, selg-centered earns fabulous sums, I am told, for a

I sat a while in the drawing room Carl sat silent through all this, his cr-so very poor at the last. And waiting, but Carl did not return. Then handsome face immobile. What he then I found I could dance-presently accustomed to meet my class of young of the extraordinary toilettes; of the what men and women are who are reed with all beautiful forms of poesy. and the gray, sombre afternoon drew dreamness by her glorious beauty. slowly to a close. As soon as I was free, I went home and hastened up to the parlor. Carl ravishingly sweet melody stole out, low, was there, some pretence of reading in delicate, sinuous, aerial, stilling every his hands. But he was only thinking, breath, alluring the pulsing through to "Well. Carl !"

my eager look. hastily. I was vexed and annoyed. "Don't be impatient, Nelly ! I am see her again to-night !" "But why to night ? Why does hesitate? Why can't a woman put by transparent, snowy drapery haloing her "There is no coquetry. Be patient of a mist of golden hair, and so at last, with ber, Nelly! You would if you when the eye and the ear are enclaincould have seen her as I did."

The wistful eyes, the inexpressible tenderness in his voice, softened me. "How did she receive you?" I asked "How did she receive me? She came to the door to meetme, and her voice fabtered through all shades of not seemed to see me, and I would not obtrude myself.

That was my vantage ground. you know. But I thought I dishonored glad to owe anything to me. But she dering people, nothing alive about the said -quite calmly, and her luminous white, rigid face except the luminous. eyes looked up with sweet frankness- fascingted e yes fixed upon Carl; then, that when I knew her history I might all at once, as the scene swam before wish all this unsaid; from what she our intense gaze, she seemed to melt knew of me she could not doubt it away from sight, sinking to the floor come to her then. She would tell me

"She has virtually owned that there me. I was quite forgotten. is something to be concealed, that she and down stairs—the true, steady step is not the well-born, epulent, indpend- would not leave me! Wait! We shall thin and elevated localities, and an teenth District, and the consequence and the clumsy, uncertain one. Then, ent lady that we have all taken her to soon know all."

"And Miss Aubusson?"

"Only said quietly that Norine had been her mother's maid, and they were used to her humors',
"A French maid in her mother's time! But what of the man who was "She grew pale and distressed at

A silence followed our talk. I read the magazines quietly. Carl pretend-ed to do the same. But I could see came out, pattered along the corridor, number of bushels in the ear-for shell-"What is he to her, do you think ?" ed to do the same. But I could see It was Carl's question. I had not that his imparionce was wearing upon

> "Shall we go somewhere?" I said at 'Oh, thank you, Nelly! I should like it." We went out into the intense, winlast : "not if he were the man he was ter night. Sublimely calm, the conmeant to be. There is really some- stellated heavers brooded over the restless world. Unmindful of the crowds, we walked on, and the benediction of heaven. A woman chained to a thing this excitement somehow : But the glory of the night will only intersify it. "Go in here! Carl, are you crazy?"

It was a second or third-rate theater. The great masses thronged here. Cammon faces were all around us ;some les-we two. But they were now only were gross faces that leered stupidly at ed into the sunlight of fame, and I sat by and shared the brightness. Nobody else had a right to be proud of him. I raptures over the pert actresses who ture went out to seek another love than crowded. Our seats were far down tomine. But this selfish feeling died in ward the stage, where no innocent illuprospect of trouble to Carl. What sions were possible. The pasteboard, would I not have done to prove Miss the tawdrines of the scenes, the roaring I found refuge in iteration .- Aubusson free and fit to mate with him? billows of blue cambric, the tinsel, the take a step forward. There was a I dreamed of her in the brief, uneasy rouge and powder, were unmitigatedly troubled, doubtful look in her eyesnaps that filled the rest of the night. obvious. The play was one of those Her sweet, pathetic beauty was before quasi moral ones where the rascally heme, the sorrowful, tender passion of ro is overcome with confusion, and piously repents at the denouement, amid For she beleived sentence had been I was curious to meet her in the the vociferous applause of the galleries. morning. I searched the proud, gentle But to-night the galleries were inattenwhose names I did not catch.

> lost the name-said our next neigh- could be so good." bor to Carl, The famous danseuse, you You see this is her last night," he fear to trust to him. explained. "It was said that her ened to appear once more. And I should woman:

Carl was in the habit of looking in the cerulean lake upon the curtain upon me almost every day; sometimes which lacked the enchantment of diswe ate our lanch together ? if it was tance, and showed crude and coarse; only five minutes that he stayed, it of the gamboge sky and the two blotchaway from the prosaic details of my dai- tains, I could not guess, for he neither ly work, and rise into Carl's world, fill- looked at me nor spoke. I think that Miss Aubusson's face came between him But to day he did not come at all, and all these things, supplanting their As I sat thinking that this was our first contact with things of this sort, a silence, beguiling the senses, flowing A shade crossed his face as he met now into subtle, silver waves that rose and fell, and rose and fell, like pelluc-"It is all unsettled as yet !' he said id waters upon some charmed shore; and rising falling, swaying upon that thread of honeyed melody, borne as the wave bears the forth upon its bosom, the danseuse—not a woman, but a fairy, no fairy, but embodied music—her like a cloud, her lily face shining out bending in graceful obeisance before the hundreds of adoring faces.

"Great God !" The smothered cry leaped all unwares from Carl's lips. The girl grew white as the laces that the door somewhat chagrined. I, too, feeling as see thanked me for what I covered her throbbing heart, and the dark, intense eyes fell as by some irresistible allurement upon us.

It was Miss Aubusson! There, under that storm of coarse applause, the target for those bold eyes, tered out of her face. But she would not blame we. She would not blame a quick, frightened cry from behind die of shame if he is seen"-and here me, she repeated. Then she said she the scenes, a shout of alarm in the theathe voice was choked by passionate sobs. had an imperative engagement to-night, tre, and the curtain went swiftly down "Don't fear! I will do my best. but she would return early, and I might upon the excited, tumultuous audience. like a leaf. He did not seem to hear

We did not hear the rest. We both rose; so, too, had haif the people in the theatre; the aisles were thronged, and our egress was delayed. As we waited throw off the mildew, which attacks outside a moment while the carriage drew up, we heard everybody talking about the wonderful denseuse. Mademoiselle had already away, and was lost to the public, it was Carl did not speak during our drive

When we reached the hotel, we went When we reached the hotel, we went is one: Having leveled the corn in quickly to our own parlor. There was the crib, mersure the length, breadth; a sound of movement in Miss Aubus- and depth, and mu t ply them together, tering tack again. Shall I go to her, Carl? If she is ill may help her." He gave me a quick, grateful look. "Thank you! Go to her, Nelly.— Beg her to make use of me; and if she better, ask when she will see us" I intercepted Morine in the entry. expressed my sympathy, and offered my service. Then I waited for the answer. It came quickly. "Mees was quite recovered, would see us presently." I went beck and gave my message to Carl. He stooped suddenly ts kiss me, but I caught the flash of tears in "You won't forget me, then ? you won't turn me out of your heart for any nowcomer?" I said, selfishly; for indeed it was hard to lose him.

"God bless you, Nelly! Never! But to think what a life she must have "I know, Carl !',

We walked up and down the room together. Our intimacy was of that rarest kind that does not need many words to express it. We had said scarcely anything more when Norine came to call us. Miss Aubusson was sitting at the further side of the large room. She rose to receive us- rose, but did not in her face a sweet, innocent pride that had yet a touching pathos. One unjustly doomed might have loyked so already passed. She did not even hold out her hand.

But when I kissed her, Carl led her You are very g 'They want Mademoiselle-"again tremulously. "I did not think you

I sat down on a has ock near by . ed for an interview, I shall know what know! Never have seen her! Is it Carl stood a little way off looking at pessible?" and the portly gentleman her. Her eyes searched his face eager Looking up at him, I could not help shrugged his shoulders in surprise and ly; they could not have read anything to the grass. The first growth is althere ominous or woful; she could not

But suddenly her eyes fell, and the hot blushes rose fast. "You will have guessed my story," she said. "You have seen my father. I had to carn money for us both. I tried very hard. yet every day we got poorer and poor knowing what I was. It was my little time of happiness, my life had been very tention of farmers to the follwing remhard. But, ch, I never meant you edies, which have been tried and should see me !" she cried, her calm- prenounced high'y successful : " #

ness for aking her. Her head drooped, she covered her and a jint of coal oil; mix well, and face with her hands. There was much sow broad cast over the potato hills. pitiful humiliation in her attitudethe burden of sorrow and shame lay so heavy upon her. She wept passiona-

Carl bent forward; drew her hands "You will not tell them?" she sobbed, shrinking from him. "You will not tell thoes people who know me? I have done no barm : I was not asbamed to be among them; I have kept myself unsoiled by any evil." "My darling, dancing may be as holy as praying. God knows all. And He has sent you to me," said Carl. He took her in his arms, wondering, incredulous of her great happiness. I slipped away softly, closing the door upon them, shutting myself, out When he gets a little excited, stop him into the loneliness, and went back to five or ten minutes; let him become the parlor that had been the home of calm; go to him, pat him, and speak ed, drifting toward the footlights, and Carl and me-never quite the same to gently to him; and as soon as the is me any more.

AGRICULTURAL.

HOW TO HAVE HEALTHY GRAPES .-In summing up the new discoveries out of the year, Hovey's Magazine says :-"The failure of the grape crop has naturally instituted inquiries as to the cause, and although it is admitted that it has been from the late spring and cold wet summer, the question arises if | take him anywhere you wish. A balky we may not secure a fair crop under horse is always high spirited and starts such circumstances, which are likely to quick; half the pull is but before him recur again. Thus the West-which the other starts first. If a horse has last year suffered as the East has this been badly spoiled, you should hitch -have a plentiful supply this year, him to an empty wagon, and pull it never better, even the Catawba being around on level ground; then put on a quite free from rot. This fact shows conclusively that moisture in excess is caressing as before, and in a short time fatal to the grape crop, and knowing this, it will be the main object of the American Farmer. cultivator to guard against it. We cannot combat with the sesson, but we shouting for Pendloton at a can and should bursue such a course of Republican Ward Meeting can and should pursue such a course of culture as will not aggravate its effects. The lesson taught by this fact is, that we should avoid everything in Cleveland last Friday evening at the Advertisements Leaded, or inserted under the head of Special Notices, and Double column. Advertisements, will be pharged 50 percent, in addition to the above should be used when the ground is flat; and all precautions taken to keep the soil warm and dry. The roots will then have energy and vitality enough to only weaker vegetation, as we see it at-

Business cards, five lines or less, one year Administrators', Executors and Guar-

Probate Notices, All Editorial and Bookl Notices, fee line, . . . .

they are in the Pleasant Valley region, where the grapes, wherever shown, have carried off the prizes this year." TO MEASURE GRAIN.-It is convenient to farmers and croppers at this season to have an easy and correct rule by which to measure corn in cribs. Here was absent a moment, and came pat- ed coru take one half of this- To be s ii t'y correct add half a bushel to every one hundred. Farmers who are fond of ciphering can test the correctness of this rule by taking 1727 solid inches for a foot, and 2150 inches in a bushel and see that the latter is nearly one fifth larger than the former. POULTRY HOUSES,-Eggs, and hens too, will be scarce, if the poultry house is infested with vermin. Pour boiling water over the roofs, and lindeed, linto every crack of the building, and if you can, wash clean with strong conp suds 4. and when this is done, whitewash then the whole.

Catch the fowls and rub a little grease under the wing, on the head, and touch various places on the body with it. The fowls will amply repay you for keeping their house scrupulously clean.

SWEEDY IN HORSES,—We have used the following liniment with perfect success, and have never known it fail in any of the numerous cases of sweeny to which we have seen it applied. We think it may be considered a cer-tain cure, unless in instances of very long standing where nothing can successfully reach it : Alcohol, 14 gills; turpentine, 14 do.; bartshorn, 14 do; sweet oil, 1 de; oil of organum, 1 de.; oil of wormwood, 1 of organum, 1 do.; oil of wormwood, 1 of an ource.

The above mixture is to be applied twice a day to the parts affected, carefully, as wherever it comes in contact with the skin, the hair is temporarily removed. Keep the part well greas-ed if it becomes sore, and after a few days applications, drop off twice a day to once in two or three days, until the liniment is used up .- Stock Journal.

KEEP THE CATTLE AND COLTS OUT F Your MEADOWS - It is very meadows in early spring. Stock will tramp up and pack the wet soil, and their track can be traced the whole season. Besides, it is very detrimental ways the most vigorous, because of the spring rains; if this is cropped, most grasses start again from the root. This makes the hay crop later and always diminishes the aggregate to a much greater extent than the benefit afforded to stock by a half bite of early TTASS. The best way we can recommend is to pay especia' attention to stock, by giving the very best hay, roots, tran or meal, and keep them from grass until they can get a full bite.— Exchange. THE POTATO BUG.—As the period for this troublesome insect to begin its devastations is near at hand, we call at-1st. Take half a bushel of saw dust Repeat the dose if the bugs make their appearance at any subsequent period-the vines after sun et; but take care not to put on too much, or the tops will Either of the above remedies will salt and water; sprinkle the brine on

2d. Make a weak brine of common drive off the potato bug during the entire season. How to Treat BALKY Horses -If you have balky horses, it is your own fault, and not the horses', for if they do not pull true there is some cause for it; and if you will remove the cause, the effect will cease, When your horse balks, be is excited, and does not know what you want him to do. over his excitement, he will, in hine cases out of ten, pull at the word. Whipping, swearing and slashing only makes the matter worse. After you have gentled him a while, and his excitement has cooled down, take him by the bit turn him each way for a few minutes as far as you can; pull out the tongue; gentle him a little; unrein him; then step before him and let the other horse start first; then you can small load, and increase it it gradually, you can have a good work horse .-

I held Carl's hand fast. It shook grape culture which has a tendency to Republican Ward meetings between maintain an excess of moisture around the friends of Mason and Parsons, conthe roots. Deep trenching and high testing candidates for the Republican "Don't go!" I entreated. "You manuring must be discarded, except in Congressional nomination in the Eighabundant drainage supplica, which will | was a large turn out. Parsons carried away the surface water before it can three cheers were given for George II.

"THE UNION, IT MUST AND SHALL BE PRESERVED."

. "No, she drove off in the coupe half

He turned upon me fiercely.

He ooked gratefally relieved "But, Carl do be ressonable!"

But I was patient.

"Well," said Carl, sharply. "Why den't you say it out, Nelly? You think mystery, Carl, why is she so reticent he may be her husband? So do I. Great

"It is not what I want, though," said Carl, impatiently. "If I could work off conceal. She was both angry and "The anger was for that beast, who turn upon me with that sharp, curt "That may have been a piece of sub-

We both retired early that night. I think it was about eleven o'clock when I went out to the studio, where I was thought of the coarse people around us; I grew almost rich. I wanted to know I heard the French maid trip softly down stars, and return present y acgirls. All that morning there was a companied by her mistress, having let to catch the eye of such a remarkably her in at a private side door. A little underneath the careless, girlish chatter handsome man; of the stale odors; of society that would have spurned me, her in at a private side door. A little underneath the careless, girlish chatter | handsome man ; of the stale odors ; or time passed, and I fell into a sound sleep from which I was suddenly awakened by a low conversation that went on just outside my room. The sounds sometimes rose to audible speeche made my day bright. I liked to get es of purple that were meant for mouncomptimes seemed to die away in sobs room was adjoining the parlor. I rose had been during the day.

steps, which she did not hear till we and she has been beseeching him to go French-looking maid, who called her mistress "Mees," and a tall, shabby man, who seemed to have the oversight man, who seemed to have the oversight rapid words to the man, and then turn out."

It was now quite twelve. I could

ently there came a tap at our parlor

"You said you would help me, Mr. 'Thank you." The word so poorly expressed the gratitude that lit her Carl went out instantly, and I c'osed son. Pray don't be alarmed."

sound of passionate, bitter weeping, and be poor. I think she is. There was A moment and the manager appear- ed which have a gentle slope to carry sult was announced in the Fifth Ward, consolation. I longed to go to her, ine sat in a wilderness of sparkling Mademoiselle had only fainted—find its way through and saturate the Pendleton, and not one for the success Norine's broken, ineffectual attempt at only a small fire in the grate, and Nor- ed.

DONE AT SHORT NOTICE. GRAHAM & BLACK, Sole Proprietors, New HANGE,

One square, one week One square, three months, changea-

One square, six months, changeable at pleasure, rearly advertisons; at three squares 21 80

Yearl advertisements four squares 1 tacks the Delaware and weaker growing sorts first. As to vineyards, to be a sure success, they should be on side hills as